LOOKING AT CHICAGO'S VIADUCTS.

The Indianapolis Official Party Gains Much Information About Crossing Railroad Tracks.

In connection with the viaduct project Mayor Sullivan, with the committees of Council and Board of Aldermen having the matter in charge, went to Chicago Thursday night to inspect the viaduct system of that city. Mr. Joseph Ramsey, jr., of the Big Four, extended an invitation to the committee some time since to visit Chicago for that purpose, and on the night named Mr. Ramsey came from Cincinnati in his car and met Mayor Sullivan, Aldermen Thalman and Laut and Councilman Murphy and City Engineer Mansfield, who, with representatives of the Journal, News and Sentinel went on the trip. The train leaving Indianapolis at 12:30 a. M. arrived on schedule time in Chicago. The party then went to the Grand Pacific Hotel, where breakfast was eaten. After breakfast the visitors looked into the Produce Exchange where a small-sized bedlam was in progress in the wheat and corn pits. While looking on, one of those persons whose vocation appears to be to overwhelm visitors with the stir and racket of Chicago volunteered the information that there had not been so still and listless a day on the Exchange for some weeks as was that day.

It was not an agreeable day for driving about the city. From the dark clouds, which seemed to be hung as canopies upon the pinnacles of the many-story buildings, occasional flakes of snow fell, while the raw breeze from the lake went to the marrow of the Iudianapolis visitors, who are constomed to a much milder atmosphere The visitors were first driven through the mile or more of almost unbroken viaduct on Twelfth street, which passes over the railway tracks, along which passes more of the trade of millions of people than over any rails in the country. The engineering department of the government of Chicago had kindly sent Mr. Kellogg, of that branch of the service, to give any assistance which his experience and knowledge of the overhead roads might suggest. The Mayor and committee, with Mr. Ramsey and Engineer Manefield, faithfully examined the whole line, compared the different kinds of construction, the grades of the approaches, the masonry, the width of the viaduct and the length of the different spans and arches. The stiff breeze from the lake set the party shivering, but the discomfort seemed to have no effect upon the Mayor and his official party. They examined everything of interest and drew out from Engineer Kellogg a variety of information which will be of great practical value to the committee. The visitors were first driven through the

The two or three members of the party who were entirely ornamental became weary of viaducts and very cold long before the inquisitive committee and the Mayor had stored their minds with the lore of viaducts. The committee found that the grades of the approaches to the proposed Indianapolis viaduct are much easier than those in Chicago, over which is hauled thousands of tons daily. Much objection has been made to a viaduct of iron because horses will be frighted by the cars passing underneath. If those making the objections could see the string of carriages and teams which are constantly passing over the Chicago viaducts, under which trains are passing continuously without a over the Chicago viaducts, under which trains are passing continuously without a carriage-horse being frightened, they would be silent. The Mayor, Mr. Ramsey and most of the party left Chicago Friday night and reached this city at an early hour yesterday morning. It is due to the officials to say that the trip was in no sense a junket. Not a dollar of the city's money was spent, while they obtained a fund of valuable information. The newspaper representatives were under special obligations to Mr. Edward Daniels for the courtesies extended on behalf of the company he represents in this city. Mr. Ramsey entertained his guests royally, but he and his party seemed to practice the professions of those who wear Francis Murphy's blue ribbon.

call and otherwise show their hospitality, and I am certain no one could be more appreciative than I am. I once sang before the Lyra Society, and I was gratified yesterday to receive a beautiful floral token from its members. I shall leave Indianapolis with a great desire to visit the place

An effort is now being made to have Mrs.

Manufacturing and Wholesale Trade.

Half a dozen gentlemen seated in the

"For a time this will be of great benefit to Indianapolis, especially to the wholesale trade, but when each of these little cities grows to a population of twenty thousand or more the wholesale trade of this city will be injured rather than improved by

"The tendency of trade now is to smaller wholesale areas. Each of these cities of 20,000 will have its own wholesale houses, buying of first hands, and selling to the growing towns and villages in their vicinboots and shoes, drugs and later on in dry goods. This is a state of affairs we will have to look in the face. Every day it becomes more and more apparent that Indianapolis must have more gas—enough to encourage manufacturers to come here and supply them after they come. One thing we have in our favor when it comes to the employing of favor when it comes to the employing of labor. Workingmen will be satisfied in a large city like this, whereas they will not be in the small cities of the gas region. They demand all the activities of a large Proposed Changes in That Organization.

L. D. Bagley, the new secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, is not in favor of the bill pending in the Legislature that provides for abclishing the board and the organization of the Indiana State Agricultural Society, the affairs of which are to be managed by a board of control. "I do not think the bill will ever be passed as it stands." he said to a reporter yesterday,

"because it is not properly framed, and would not. I think, stand a legal test. The title is not in accordance with the body of the bill, and if this Legislature sees fit to pass such a bill it will necessarily have to

"In what way?" he was asked.
"Well, the title says that the bill is intended to 'promote agriculture, manufacture, science and art,' and the various organizations that are supposed to represent these departments are mentioned in the first section. As a matter of fact, however, no organization is given representation in the board of control pertaining to science or art, and no provision is made for a women's department. This in itself is a great oversight on the part of the framers of the bill, and should prove a hindrance to its regular State officers, and confounds the | closing scenes of this life."

She was one of the best women I ever knew, not only as a singer but as a true, noble-hearted woman. My husband was with her company for eight years, and never did I hear him say a word about her except in praise. Emma Abbott was a woman whose place will be hard to fill."

"You claim Indianapolis as your home, do you not?" asked the reporter.

"I always have, for I was brought up, you might say, in this city. I have not visited it since 1887, and when I came in the other day I was astonished at the great "What effect does this have upon Indian-" sary personal expenses of their attendance on not exceeding two meetings in any one year. The Auditor, after auditing their accounts, is to issue the warrants, and on them the Treasurer of State is to pay the bills out of the money regularly appropriated for agricultural purposes. This provision is either too exacting or it should not be included at all, and I can see no reason, if it remain as it is, why the State should not pay the mileage, too. There is still another provision to which I object. Section 4 says that the new board cannot pay over 6 per cent. interest for any money that may be borrowed. This is unfair, for there is no way of telling what the condition of the money market may be at a given time. For instance, it is almost impossible to borrow money to-day at 6 per cent. and no such provision should be included in the bill. In many ways the bill is a good one, but I cannot say that I approve of all the changes contemplated." MILLIONAIRES OF THE FUTURE

When a man says he is "a self-made man, sir, yessir," it is, at least, very noble of him to take the whole blame on himself. We lay it on our friends.
